At midnight on December 31, bells at Buddhist temples all over Japan will ring out signifying the start of the Japanese New Year’s festivities. Each bell will ring 108 times to symbolize the 108 human sins in Buddhist belief, and to erase the sins of the year so that the New Year can start fresh. Japanese families will have gathered together to eat, drink and welcome the New Year together, usually watching holiday specials on the television. Then, on January 1, they will clean their homes to start the New Year off on the right foot.

Prior to the Meiji period, the date of the Japanese New Year was based on the Chinese lunar calendar. In 1873, five years after the Meiji Restoration, the Gregorian calendar was adopted in Japan and the first day of January became the official and cultural New Year’s Day.

February 8 begins the Year of the Monkey. Part of the Chinese Zodiac Calendar, the Monkey holds the ninth of twelve positions in the cycle. This year will host special festivals at the Nikko Toshō-gū Shrine, home of the Three Wise Monkeys carvings: Mizu, covering his eyes, who sees no evil; Kikazaru, covering his ears, who hears no evil; and Hazedaru, covering his mouth, who speaks no evil. The annual Nagasaki Lantern Festival celebrates the Chinese New Year in an explosion of color and light. For 15 nights, Nagasaki’s Chinatown will be awash in the light of more than 15,000 lanterns and you can experience dances, fireworks, performances, parades and processions and even a beauty contest. Celebrate on a trip with Travel & Tours and wish for prosperity and good health in the Year of the Monkey.
